DOMINICAN REPUBLIC - 2015

DEAR FRIENDS,

Through your partnership and support, 2015 was a landmark year as Stop Hunger Now broadened our impact and achieved major milestones that we never imagined when volunteers packed the first meal 10 years ago. This year alone, we nourished nearly 500,000 lives, distributed aid to 37 countries and engaged approximately 350,000 volunteers in packing nearly 59 million meals domestically and internationally.

The impact is powerful. As Nancy Letteri, who directs our aid distribution partner, Children of Vietnam, stated, "Stop Hunger Now meals empower us to serve a hot meal each day in school. For many of our students, this is the only meal they receive. Once fed, our children are able to learn and grow."

With the adoption of the United Nation's Sustainable Development Goals (SDG) in 2015, nations around the world committed to work together to end world hunger by 2030. SDG Goal two is Zero Hunger, and it's very clear that Stop Hunger Now is being called forth to play a major role in ending hunger over the next fifteen years.

In 2015, we continued to grow as a global organization, scaling our efforts to empower people to end hunger in their lives. We opened a new location in India, and developed plans to open our first South American location in Peru.

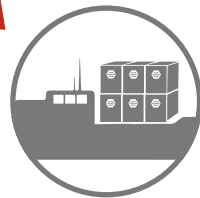

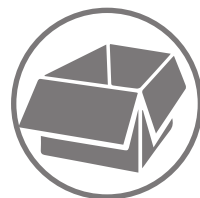

Our organization has grown exponentially, and the ways in which we empower people to end hunger continue to change. Our meal packaging program has grown an average of more than 50 percent per year over the past ten years; our fundraising and development efforts have dramatically expanded to include major partners such as Kraft Heinz; and sustainable community development projects we support are building resiliency and empowering people to feed themselves.

Thank you to our volunteers, donors and partners for your role in our work together to end world hunger.

Sincerely,

Rod Brooks, President and CEO
Kate Day, Chair, Board of Directors

NOURISHING LIVES

HARVESTED

Next to maize, rice is the most commonly consumed grain with regard to human nutrition and caloric intake. Along with soy or lentil proteins, vegetables and vitamins, rice is the fourth and final ingredient in our meals that provide help to those suffering from hunger around the world.

TRANSPORTED

The rice we use is sourced locally whenever possible and transported to one of our locations around the world. From there, staff store and inventory the rice along with the other meal ingredients until they are needed for a meal packaging event.

PACKAGED

Volunteers from corporations, civic groups and faith communities come together to package meals for those in need. They combine the rice with three other dry ingredients into a meal bag that, with water, becomes a highly nutritious vegetarian meal.

BOXED

Meals are packed into boxes at volunteer events. Boxes are returned to Stop Hunger Now warehouses and stored. When enough meals have been packaged, they are ready to ship internationally to programs that serve the hungry.

SHIPPED

The boxes of completed meals, packed inside a shipping container, leave a warehouse and make their way across the sea to one of the countries where our Impact Partners operate their programs.

DISTRIBUTED

From the ports, our Impact Partners transport the meals and ensure they have safe passage to their program sites. This can involve a combination of transportation methods, and the meals can travel thousands of miles before they reach their final destinations. Whether the meals are delivered to a school, orphanage, clinic or vocational center, our Impact Partners provide fair distribution of these nutritious meals.

STORED

Stop Hunger Now meals have a two-year shelf life, allowing them to travel long distances and be served for many months. We work with our Impact Partners to determine the number of meal shipments they will need each year, enabling them to reallocate resources to support their program, their staff or their facility.

COOKED

When we provide meals to our Impact Partners, we include instructions on hygiene and safe cooking practices. Most locations customize the meals into local dishes that are suited to the regional palate. Meals are often accompanied by local vegetables, protein and spices, depending on availability.

SERVED

Stop Hunger Now meals are most commonly served in schools, but are also served in vocational training programs, medical clinics, maternal health facilities, child and youth development centers and elder care facilities. Adolescents in vocational training programs and boarding schools take roles in gardening, preparing meals and sewing table cloths for the cafeterias.

NOURISHED

Stop Hunger Now meals attract children to schools and prevent dropouts while alleviating short-term hunger and enabling children to learn. Girls, especially, are more likely to attend school when food is present. Our meals complement the benefits of medicine in health facilities. Providing our meals to community empowerment programs enables participants to gain new skills without losing income.

One in nine people across the globe go to bed hungry each night. By addressing hunger-related issues, we can stimulate relief and create sustainable solutions to break the cycle of poverty.

TRANSFORMING LIVES

When we first met Cris, age 6, in the village of Iloilo in the Philippines, he showed all of the red flags of malnutrition. He was weak, had low energy, his skin was dry, his face was pale and he had a bloated stomach. His appetite was low.

After Cris enrolled in Stop Hunger Now partner International Care Ministries' (ICM) malnutrition treatment program, called Home Based Feeding, the ICM nutrition team confirmed that at 23 pounds and 3 feet 3 inches tall, Cris was severely malnourished.

While Cris's father works as a fisherman in the rural slum area of Iloilo, earning $11 USD per week, he struggles to cover the costs of his family's basic needs.

Over the next eight weeks of the Home Based Feeding program, Cris's mother, Marissa, prepared three Stop Hunger Now meals each day for Cris and his 4-year-old brother, Joey, in the family's small hut. Marissa used the meal ingredients to create porridge and rice cakes.

The progress Cris made in the program was more than his family could have hoped for. He is now happy, healthy and thriving. Thanks to the nutritious Stop Hunger Now meals, he gained 12 pounds to reach a healthy weight of 35 pounds. Cris became stronger, full of energy, his skin has improved, and his face has become bright. Joey also gained weight, from 19 pounds to 26 pounds—a seven pound increase.

Cris is just one of thousands of children who have been assisted by Stop Hunger Now meals. In 2015, 52.79% of our aid went to youth education initiatives.

While no single organization can solve hunger alone, Stop Hunger Now is committed to creating effective partnerships to address the many underlying causes of hunger and working together to end hunger in our lifetime.

COLLABORATING FOR GOOD

Innovative WASH Initiative Helps Prevent Hygiene-Related Illnesses

As Stop Hunger Now works to distribute meals to children in schools around the globe, sanitation and hygiene go hand-in-hand with our nutrition and education initiatives. That's why we've partnered with Clean the World since 2012 to provide more than 225,000 bars of soap to our partners in 16 countries. This initiative aligns with the acronym WASH, which stands for WAter Sanitation and Hygiene.

Clean the World, a global health social enterprise, recycles bars of soap discarded by the hospitality industry and other sectors to distribute to people in need, preventing hygiene-related illnesses and deaths and encouraging healthy childhood development.

In 2015 alone, Stop Hunger Now teamed up with Clean the World to send more than 86,000 bars of soap to our partners for distribution to education initiatives. Teachers are able to utilize the soap to teach their students about the practice and importance of proper hand washing.

DEVELOPING SUSTAINABLE PARTNERSHIPS

HAITI - 2015

With many of our in-country partners, our relationship goes beyond providing nutrition through meals. From tilapia fish farming to digging wells, we are committed to working with our partners to help our meal recipients become empowered and self-sufficient.

In the remote mountain village of Pala, Guatemala, a community of farmers travels up dirt roads to tend to five concrete tanks of tilapia fish. As they feed the fish, wash the tanks and check the water temperature, their sights are set on more than growing fish; they are working toward a future source of protein and income.

These farmers are part of a pilot project with Guatemala Village Partners and Stop Hunger Now, which has supported this community since 2010.

“We don’t want them to become dependent on the meals forever,” says Patty Ajanel, Country Director of Guatemala Village Partners. “We want them to become independent.”

Education and economic development have been key concerns in the region, which offers few opportunities to its indigenous people. Community members know how to grow coffee and bananas, but many farms have been devastated due to rust plant disease. A local group of farmers who completed agricultural training are leading the initiative, including the construction and operation of the farm. “They are aware of the work it takes,” Patty says.

Stop Hunger Now’s relationship with Guatemala Village Partners has a solid foundation thanks to the support of Kirk of Kildaire

Presbyterian Church in Cary, North Carolina. Hal Jordan, co-founder of Guatemala Village Partners, explained the depth of this partnership, from raising funds, to packaging meals and visiting Guatemala to help implement new programs.

From school feeding to micro-lending programs, Barney Hail, a volunteer with Kirk of Kildaire Presbyterian Church, sees the impact. “I’ve seen what’s evolved, and I’ve had a chance to see outcomes.”

One clear outcome is the health of the children in the region. By traveling to some of the remote villages where meals are distributed, Patty has observed that some of the children had white spots on their skin, but after a year of meals, the spots disappeared. “The children are healthier, and more awake during class,” she said.

EMPOWERING VOLUNTEERS

GEORGE AND MICHELE SHAW (RIGHT) REPRESENT STOP HUNGER NOW AT A JULY 4 PARADE IN FAIRFAX, VIRGINIA.

After taking part in a Stop Hunger Now meal packaging event at Fairfax Community Church in Fairfax, Virginia, it didn't take long for volunteers George and Michele Shaw to become dedicated advocates in the fight against world hunger. Since then, the couple has participated in nine additional meal packaging events, helping to package more than one million meals for distribution around the globe.

But they didn't stop there. George and Michele, along with a team from Fairfax Community Church, have completed hundreds of hours of volunteer service at Stop Hunger Now warehouse locations in Raleigh, North Carolina, and Ashburn, Virginia, helping to build pallets for food shipments and sanitize food containers and other equipment.

The Shaws are true advocates for Stop Hunger Now. As the project manager for Davidson College's alumni service initiative, George has worked to coordinate multiple Stop Hunger Now meal packaging events in Raleigh and Charlotte, North Carolina, and hopes to expand these events to six cities by 2017.

In October 2016, George and Michele will have the opportunity to see the direct impact their extensive volunteer efforts have had on children in Belize as they join Stop Hunger Now's annual vision trip.

"My wife and I were very impressed with the Stop Hunger Now mission and personnel. We were looking for a charity to work with on a broad basis. Hunger is a huge issue internationally and significant progress is being made. Giving school kids a nutritious meal helps keep them in school, which increases the probability that they can break the cycle of poverty."

—George Shaw,
Stop Hunger Now Volunteer

GUATEMALA - 2015

PROVIDING NUTRITIOUS MEALS

Stop Hunger Now meals are nutritiously sound and provide a comprehensive array of micronutrients. Research has shown that one in three people in developing countries are adversely affected by vitamin and mineral deficiencies. Addressing the problem of hunger is the single point where we can leverage relief for all humanitarian issues.

Since 2013, the Kraft Heinz Company Foundation has contributed funding and technical expertise to help Stop Hunger Now improve the composition of the micronutrient sachets to provide greater nutritional value to the meals comprised of rice, soy protein and dehydrated vegetables. Every meal is fortified with 23 essential vitamins and nutrients. In 2015, the Foundation provided funding to procure more than 9.8 million sachets that provided the micronutrients for 58.9 million Stop Hunger Now meals. Stop Hunger Now is proud to be part of the Kraft Heinz Micronutrient Campaign, the signature corporate social responsibility program of the Kraft Heinz Company and its Foundation.

RESPONDING TO CRISIS & DISASTER

One of the advantages of having international affiliates in six countries is that we are well-positioned to deliver food and aid following global crises and disasters. These stories illustrate the impact of our global Stop Hunger Now presence in 2015.

INDIA FLOODING

Last November, the skies opened up over Chennai and released 11 inches of rain—34 times the daily average—on the impoverished eastern Indian city. The deluge triggered the worst flooding in the region in a century. In the weeks during and after the rains, the following aid was deployed:

389,000 meals provided to more than 5,000 families in affected districts. With the majority of the people in the region making a living as small farmers, daily wage-earners and marginal laborers, the floods severely impacted their capacity to feed their families. The meals helped fill this gap, while providing the nourishment necessary to stave off vitamin-deficiency-related health issues in the wake of the disaster.

Health care services provided to roughly 4,000 citizens—mostly women, children and senior citizens—in 20 villages impacted by the Kraft Heinz India Mobile Health Unit (MHU). The MHU uses vans equipped with basic medical and health supplies to bring relief to hurting communities.

Eight tons of supplies—from clothing to cooking vessels—collected and disseminated by volunteers in Mumbai.

10 boxes of soap and hygiene kits provided to 540 families in five villages.

10,000 packets of nutrition drinks provided to patients supported by Hope Foundation.

INDIA - 2015

NEPAL - 2015

NEPAL EARTHQUAKE

In April and May 2015, Nepal was wracked by earthquakes as well as subsequent aftershocks. More than 8,500 people were killed, 650,000 left homeless, and three million lost access to potable water. In the wake of the destruction, Stop Hunger Now's crisis response included: 450 Sawyer® water filters, each capable of supplying up to 295 gallons of water per day for 10 years.

142,560 meals air freighted from our Kansas City, Kansas, location to Nepal by FedEx and Heart to Heart International.

Nazarene Compassionate Ministries distributed the meals to help more than 100 families.

75,000 meals from neighboring Stop Hunger Now India.

524,000 meals from nearby Stop Hunger Now Malaysia received by the Nepal embassy in Singapore and distributed by 84 Rotary Clubs.

Two Interagency Emergency Health Kits each with enough medicine to treat 10,000 people for 90 days post-disaster.

BUILDING INTERNATIONAL LEADERSHIP

Stop Hunger Now established and partners closely with six global in-country offices that are aligned strategically with Stop Hunger Now's mission and vision. The offices are located in South Africa, Malaysia, Italy, Philippines, India and Peru. Our newest international locations, India and Peru, both opened in 2015.

Stop Hunger Now's global in-country offices, like Stop Hunger Now in the U.S., implement a holistic approach to ending hunger by the year 2030. The main benefits of global in-country offices are:

- Local procurement of ingredients and equipment, improving the local economy
- Ability to cater meals to local tastes and needs while partnering with smaller NGOs
- Improved ability to respond to local and regional crisis and natural disasters
- Improved capacity to monitor and evaluate the impact of our meals and partners
- Regional feeding with the ability to engage meal packaging volunteers in distribution
- Engaging and educating local volunteers in the movement to end hunger

LIBERIA

In Ganta, Liberia, 450,000 citizens have just one hospital to turn to for medical care. Since 2012, Stop Hunger Now has collaborated with the North Carolina United Methodist Conference to support the Ganta United Methodist Hospital through annual shipments of requested supplies including sutures, scrubs, antibiotics, gloves, and adhesive tape. These supplies, along with medical gloves, face masks and personal protection equipment, were of critical importance during an Ebola outbreak in West Africa in March 2015.

EXPANDING OUR REACH

Stop Hunger Now distributes meals to initiatives in developing countries that promote education, encourage children to attend school, improve students' health and nutrition, address gender inequalities, stimulate economic growth and are part of the movement to end world hunger in our lifetime. Through our meal packaging events, Stop Hunger Now reaches and engages thousands of people each year in the fight against hunger—including communities of faith, corporations, Rotary and other civic clubs and schools.

From groups of 30 to 40 people packaging 10,000 nutrient-rich meals in just under two hours, to hundreds of employees coming together to fill a shipping container with 285,120 meals for people in need worldwide, our volunteers have the opportunity to learn about global hunger issues and become advocates for our cause.

“The basic premise of Stop Hunger Now just makes sense. People need help and people want to help. They just need to know a vehicle by which they can provide the assistance. Stop Hunger Now provides that vehicle in a tangible way in which people can see, feel and participate in the mission.”

Stop Hunger Now supporter

“I had the opportunity to attend a Stop Hunger Now event where the founder spoke. His vision changed my perspective on the world problem of hunger completely. Until then, I had thought of this world issue as something to help alleviate and help mitigate. But what I heard was a convincing and enthusiastic argument for the idea that world hunger could be actually solved and, even more daringly, that it could be done within our lifetime. I left convinced of this fact and of the pivotal role that Stop Hunger Now plays in accomplishing this objective.”
